

Babatunji Ifarinu, M.Ed.

Babatunji (Tunji) is the founder of 'Nu Pedagogy, an educational consulting firm that provides assistance to students, parents, and community organizations. With over ten years experience in the educational field, Tunji assists clients in identifying academic requirements, growth potential, and hidden roadblocks to ensure that every child successfully navigates the public school system. Tunji has a Master's Degree in Educational Leadership from Georgia State University. His graduate studies focused on the development of quality leadership in schools. Tunji earned a Bachelor's degree in History & Geography Education from Florida A&M University and has been an educator in Georgia for almost a decade.

As a certified teacher, Tunji specializes in working with teenage males of African descent. Through his work, he has educated youth in elementary, middle, and high school settings. Tunji has served as the head of a high school poetry society, inspiring youth to speak out with a thoughtful voice. As a creative poet and music producer himself, Tunji's talents are endless. He mentors students through testing requirements for graduation and continuing on to college.

Tunji has lectured widely on issues of public school policy including training parents on effective means to interact with school personnel, knowing your rights with regard to Federal and State Special Education Laws, and the popular subject, "Po' Child Left Behind".

In addition to educating our youth, Tunji facilitates leadership development, team building, personal growth, and ropes courses. His work in this area includes corporate (Culligan), non-profit (Kappa Alpha Psi, Inc. and Project Healthy Grandparents) institutional (Stripling Elementary and Atlanta Public Schools), and college student (Georgia State University) groups.

Tunji currently works as a 5th grade science teacher. In addition, he works as a wrap-around services counselor providing educational, emotional, and life skills guidance to youth of African descent. As a husband and father of three girls, Tunji prides himself in being a source of cultural and spiritual inspiration to his family and community.

If you are excited about the possibility of booking Tunji Ifarinu or any of his associates for speaking engagements, consulting, counseling services, or teambuilding, he can be reached at Ifarinu@gmail.com or by calling 404-667-8823 for scheduling.